ManyMonths® ECO Hempies Clothing: A Gentle Evolution for a Timeless Childhood

Add to What You Already Have

We delight in introducing a few cool additions inspired by nature and the linear pathways of beachside boardwalks, but the ManyMonths philosophy remains unchanged: celebrating the slow, and sustainable. In the world of trends changing much too fast, we cherish continuity. Our signature designs continue their journey, upholding the ethos that in slow fashion, evolution doesn't mean discarding the classics, but elevating their essence.

A Top Choice for Every Child

Our little ones, with their delicate skin and developing bodies, deserve the utmost care and comfort. ManyMonths ECO Hempies harnesses the natural power of hemp to ensure they receive just that. These eco-conscious fabrics with 55% hemp & 45% organic cotton, rooted in the wisdom of nature, offers unparalleled benefits.

In every seam of ECO Hempies, there is a promise - a promise of nature's best, of a brighter, more sustainable future for our children. Hemp requires minimal resources to grow - a choice for environmental responsibility.

Two Very Important ECO Hempies Benefits

Consistent Body Temperature: Babies and children are still mastering the art of body temperature regulation. Hempies aid in this process, providing warmth during chilly times and breathability during warm/hot days, ensuring a comfortable environment for our children's adventures and rest. Hempies' thermoregulatory properties ensure babies and children remain neither too hot nor too cold, but just right, also promoting longer, undisturbed sleep.

UV Protection: Children's skin is especially vulnerable to the sun's harmful rays. Hemp naturally filters out harmful UV rays, adding an extra layer of protection during outdoor play.

THERMOREGULATION, so important for children!

Hemp's structure is such that it allows the skin to breathe efficiently. The hollow nature of hemp fibers makes them both insulating and breathable, which helps regulate temperature.

Hemp can absorb moisture up to 20% of its own weight and still retain its insulating properties. This is crucial because moisture trapped against the skin can lead to discomfort and temperature fluctuations.

Even though hemp can absorb moisture, it releases it quickly, meaning that it dries faster than many other materials. This property helps in maintaining a consistent temperature around the body, especially in varying environments.

Natural UV-protection, but how?

Both hemp and wool offer thermoregulatory properties, but they do so in different ways. Hemp with its breathability and moisture-wicking properties, excels in both warm and cool conditions, but does not provide quite the same level of insulation as wool in very cold conditions.

The inherent chemical composition of hemp fibers, rich in lignin and cellulose, contributes to UV resistance. Lignin in plants absorbs UV light, and its presence in hemp can enhance the Hempies fabric's UV protective properties.

Hemp fibers have a dense cellular structure, which inherently makes Hempies fabric more opaque than other fabrics. This opacity aids in blocking and reflecting a significant portion of the sun's harmful UV rays, preventing them from penetrating through the fabric.

Hemp contains natural compounds that act as antioxidants. Antioxidants have the capability to absorb UV radiation and dissipate it as heat, providing an added layer of protection against UV damage.

Many synthetic materials degrade upon prolonged exposure to sunlight, losing their UV protective qualities. Hemp is highly resistant to sunlight and doesn't break down as easily. This means that, over time, hemp usually retains its UV protective qualities better than synthetics. (Colour fading may happen, though.)

Pool & Sea

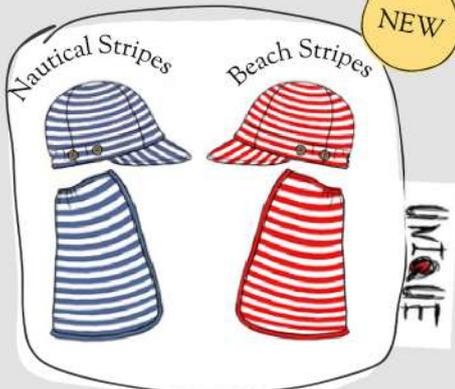

Natural materials offer a distinct advantage in environments like pools and the sea. Hemp and organic cotton are more resistant to the effects of salt and chlorine compared to synthetic fabrics. No material is immune to the bleaching effect of the sun and salty or chlorinated water, though, and we thus recommend the natural colour option for these environments.

Soft & wide-brimmed

Protect children from the sun's rays with wide-brimmed sun hats. The non-rigid design and naturally thermoregulatory properties ensures comfort, allowing babies to wear the ECO Hempies sun hats for extended periods without fuss. With the natural coconut button in front, the brim can be conveniently lifted up, ensuring a clear view. Durable and machine-washable, the Hats remains comfy wear after wear, making them a perfect addition to every baby's spring and summer wardrobe.

MultiCap

The foundation of this hat is its classic cap aesthetic. When more sun protection is in order, the easily attachable legionnaire flap comes into play, shielding the neck from sun exposure. Understanding that children grow in leaps and bounds, the Cap's circumference is designed to be stretchy and adjustable, ensuring a snug fit as our kids grow. The crown part is made of woven hemp, and the back part of hemp/organic cotton jersey for best comfort.

ManyMonths® ECO Hempies Summer Hats

Grow-Along Features

Recognizing the growth spurts and changes children undergo, we have incorporated an elastic and adjustable circumference. This ensures that the hats mold comfortably to every child's head shape, providing a snug fit that evolves with them, lasting through several seasons of growth.

Style: Light

The Light Hat offers several advantages due to its construction and material. The fabric is lightweight, making the hat comfortable to wear for extended periods. Despite its lightness, the fabric is durable and can withstand wear and tear, making it a long-lasting investment. Hemp fibers have natural moisture-wicking properties, ensuring that sweat is effectively drawn away from the skin, which reduces the chances of skin irritations. The weave allows for great airflow, ensuring the hat is comfortable in hot weather and heads remains cool and well-ventilated.
